INDIA- UK SOCIO-LEGAL RESEARCH WRITING

[1st October (Tuesday), 2019]

CONCEPT NOTE:

Higher education is a research oriented study. It is for the teachers, students and researchers to investigate into the issues, discuss and find solutions in the present scenario. All Universities have research department for the doctoral degree programme. Universities have been trying their best to produce original and landmark research work. However in the changing dimension in the world order there has been a significant shift in research writing techniques. More so research is no longer uni-disciplinary. It is inter-disciplinary, multi-disciplinary and cross-disciplinary as well. Therefore there is a scope of learning the research methodology and technique of writing research papers in different disciplinary-dimension. Law is a major instrument to control and regulate behaviour of people for protecting and promoting the interest of society, hence multi-dimensional study in social sciences research is obviously an urgent requirement. In the globalised academic scenario, legal education has to play interdisciplinary, multidisciplinary, cross disciplinary and transdisciplinary approach in order to bring authentic solutions to the variety of issues the society is facing. The variability in research techniques are essentially to be examined in this workshop.

In this regards, Chanakya National Law University is going to organise one day international participatory workshop to discuss the issues, methods, techniques etc. in socio-legal research writing. In this workshop professors from Cardiff University and Northumbria University (UK) will be the resource persons who will discuss about contemporary research issues in United Kingdom. The discussion will be shared by professors from various Universities in India including National Law Universities and Research Institutions of repute. This participatory workshop between INDIA and UK will help in learning and sharing contemporary research in India and U.K comparatively.

The workshop will discuss the meaning, scope and significance of socio-legal research writing. Writing of various types of abstracts, synopsis, research paper, seminar paper/work in progress paper, book review, monographs, commentaries, project reports, research projects etc. The workshop will focus on methodology of writing research, reviewing research papers, peer reviews, writing thesis etc. It will also discuss UGC regulations on 'Ethics and Integrity' in research writing in connection to copyright and plagiarism issues. The problems and prospects of interdisciplinary/multidisciplinary research shall be the agenda of discussion also.
